Real Estate and Loans
The enlargement of the LOAN Market so as to cover the wants and necessities of the large number of honorable people who are not owners of unencumbered Real Estate was one of the most necessary innovations of recent years. To many it has meant relief from pressing claims at the very time when most essential. When properly and honorably conducted this business is of equal importance and value to the community as Building and Loan Associations have proved themselves to be.

The Hawaiian Investment Co.
Makes a specialty of Negotiating and Procuring Loans for Borrowers who are unable to discount their Notes at the Banks and who do not care to obligate themselves to some friend or acquaintance by asking his endorsements to their Note.
This Company will make Loans upon Household Furniture, Pianos, Organs, Horses, Mules, Wagons, Carriages and Personal Property without removing the Property from the Borrower's possession and all business will be conducted on a STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL BASIS.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 5, 1894
"CONSTITUTIONAL RULE IN HAWAII."

[From the Boston Transcript.] To the Editor of the Transcript: Now that the smoke and noise of the political battle are passed, may I ask space to reply to the volley of questions good-naturedly fired at me by "A. B. C." in your paper of a short time ago?
Q. First, I reply there was a constitutional convention, composed of the council and a number of delegates chosen from among the people of the different islands. In that convention as delegates there were six native Hawaiians, fourteen Hawaiians born of foreign parents, nine Americans, three British, three Portuguese, two Germans—all old residents and fully identified with the country. Not one could properly be called an "alien," as has been done.

The convention was in deliberative session for twenty-four days, and notwithstanding all the difficulties and wide differences of opinion, a result had been reached which was unanimously ratified.

The convention by a unanimous vote provided in the constitution that the first president of the republic should be chosen by the delegates assembled. At the expiration of his term of office (1902) "the Legislature shall meet to elect a president for a term of six years," and so on.

Q. Second. The constitution thus provides for the election of President Dole by the delegates—not by the people at large, who were not all citizens of the country entitled to the franchise and a right to vote.

Q. Third. President Dole's election was in full accord with the constitution adopted as above; there was no "direct violation of the constitution, such as it was," and the allusion to Mr. D. B. Hill has no analogy, and a comparison with President Dole is unfortunate.

Q. Fourth. "It may be interesting to know"—That the Constitution provides, very wisely, for large liberty of the press, there are honorable criticism in some of the newspapers, and a tone of independent judgment upon government measures; there is practically a "free press." Freedom of speech and pen is one thing; violent seditious language is another; vile epithets and unbridled license quite another, and the fact that the largest liberty is allowed to pass unnoticed by the Government is proof positive of the inherent strength with which public sentiment sustains law and order as represented by the Administration.

Q. Fifth. The late Government having failed to keep inviolate "the Constitution" that was, which had been publicly acknowledged and sworn to, there was no "usurping administration" but a public ap-prising of the people en masse, and a resuming of administrative power by the people and for the people, in accordance with the well-known truism "self protection is the first law of nature." "Purity of purpose" is a most important factor in all good government, and the events of the twenty months past have fully shown, in the administration of every department of the new Government, that it has been realized as it had not been for the twenty years preceding.

"Missionary principles as now promulgated at Hawaiian Islands" are the same in kind and largely in text as those proclaimed at the formation of the American Republic.

"The affairs of Hawaii are of such a character" under the present Government, that the most scrutinizing examination is invited.

The acts of the administration are open to public inspection, the meetings of the councils are free to visitors; the Government finances are reported in the public press every week, showing receipts and expenditures. The press have easy access to all departments, and all that is asked is that courteous and truthful statements shall be made. "Friendship does not demand that only one side be published." No objection is or will be made to "fair play and accurate knowledge" and there is no suppression of any truth or honest difference of opinion.

It can be truthfully stated that a large majority of newspaper correspondents for United States papers have been in full sympathy with the new order of things.

It was my privilege to be in Honolulu July 4 last, the day of promulgating the new constitution. It was a day of serious, thoughtful celebration. No military display, no hilarious mirth, but the people realized the great event, momentous in the history of the nation, and that tempered their joy that another republic had been born to good or ill.

On the 5th—the next day—the closing duties of the convention took place. It was an occasion long to be remembered, as one member after another rose and spoke of their work, their hopes and fears, their full and free discussions; and yet at last all united in the one grand consummation of a new constitution that should give civil and religious liberty, free schools and good government to a nation. The native Hawaiian members were not a whit behind their foreign-born associates in words of hope, encouragement and anticipation for a brighter future than had yet dawned upon the Paradise of the Pacific.

I wish the Transcript would find place for President Dole's address to the Constitutional Convention. It is a remarkable document, and could our people have the privilege of reading it I am sure that the already high opinion entertained in this country of his ability and patriotism would be increased. It would prove a state paper well worthy to be classed as one that will long stand as an exponent of the loftiest sentiments of public duty. If you cannot give it in full, I hope you will give the concluding sentences:
